Conclusions Our data suggest that impairment in neuropsychiatric development in terms of attention deficit and learning impairment is more frequent in children with CHB than in their siblings. However, this risk appears predominantly confined to children of mothers with SLE.